USF-St. Petersburg campaign announced

A $4.75-million comprehensive gift income campaign to support the St. Petersburg campus was announced March 8 by Jack Critchfield, president of Florida Progress and chairman of the campaign.

"Campaign USF: Opportunities for Excellence" in part of USF's overall campaign. "Campaign USF: Opportunities to Shape Florida's Future." The total USF campaign has so far brought in $60-million of its $111-million goal.

Critchfield also announced that Florida Progress has committed an additional $200,000 to the St. Petersburg campaign. That brings the total commitment of Florida Progress to the campaign to $640,000.

"The support of this community is a real indication of its commitment to education and to USF at St. Petersburg," Critchfield said. "I believe that the University and the community need to support each other for both to succeed."

"Through the Opportunities for Excellence comprehensive campaign, the University of South Florida at St. Petersburg has launched a major fund drive that will enable it to continue to provide top-quality teaching, research and service to the community," said St. Petersburg campus Dean Lowell E. Davis. "With our excellent volunteer campaign leadership, I know we will quickly achieve our goals."

"With the private support this campaign will generate comes a stronger campus that is better able to serve the organizations and individuals in Pinellas County," President Borkowski said. "I have great confidence in the strength of our volunteer team and in the success of this campaign."

Gifts from campaign leaders include $400,000 from the St. Petersburg Times and $175,000 from C&S National Bank. Although the gifts are made to the overall campaign, much of the money is earmarked for the St. Petersburg program.

Of the $4.75-million goal, $4.2-million will go to endowment purposes, including scholarships, professorships and an emeritus scholars position. The balance will be used for special projects and specialized equipment.
