Sustainability Program of Study

Dr Anna Lewis reported:

1. November 2012 the Sustainability group convened to develop a Sustainability program at USFSP. The group collected data by surveying the perceptions of what sustainability is and how it will affect their program and students success in education and professional development. The group has also been comparing other institutions and their sustainability programs. The collected data has proven that sustainability programs are important to bring to campus because the program will bring partnerships and collaboration between colleges, grant opportunities, and increase enrollment for our campus.

2. Dr. Lewis and the Sustainability group invites education faculty to participate and sign the proclamation for Sustainability.
