BOR MEETING HIGHLIGHTS

The Oct. 2 meeting of the Florida Board of Regents, held at Florida State University, was highlighted by the Board's decision to seek State funds for Phase II of the University of South Florida College of Medicine, the election of new officers, a report on residence hall visitation and approval of a new "experimental" student publications board for the University of Florida.

In adopting the 1973-74 Legislative Capital Outlay Budget Request and the State University System six-year plan, the Regents voted to request a special allocation of $8.6 million in State funds by the Legislature to finance Phase II of the USF Medical College, federal funds for which were recently denied.

Jacksonville businessman J. J. Daniel was reelected to a one-year term as BOR chairman and attorney Marshall Criser of Palm Beach was reelected vice chairman.

The Regents heard a two-page report on residence hall visitation at the six SUS schools extending residence hall privileges. Facilities Committee Chairman Fred Parker reported that the present BOR policy (adopted May 1) has been implemented smoothly, noting that with the exception of freshmen women the vast majority of parents and students opted for visitation areas. At USF, 12 percent of the 2,754 residence hall students have non-visititation areas (34 percent of freshmen women opted for no visitation).

The Board approved University of Florida President Stephen O'Connell's proposal for a new student publications board to function as publisher of the Florida Alligator and to recommend a plan of action for eventual independence of the University of Florida student newspaper.

The Board also approved in concept a "Uniform Transaction System" (UNIFTRAN) for the SUS "to insure more efficient business management" of the SUS by providing "accountability for the use of money, space and personnel." The computer-based UNIFTRAN system, unique in the nation, will make possible uniformity of business and financial data used at the nine State universities and when implemented in 1974 will provide comparisons so that more efficient use of resources will result.

The Chancellor reported to the Board on SUS enrollment projections, past and present, and related their impact on facilities and program development. He noted that the present SUS enrollment of 87,000 students will grow to about 117,000 by 1981, and stressed that capital outlay funds in the amount of $180 million will be needed to meet these projected needs.

The Regents also heard a presentation on reorganization of Florida State University's College of Education, which has been restructured, with four divisions of various programs substituted for departments.

USF President Cecil Mackey reported on: WUSF-TV's credit courses on "YOU" and plans to create independent study packages for the courses; CLEP test results; and the new Personal Resource Center designed to centralize and coordinate academic, personal and career counseling.
