Chip Conner Named As New Cage Mentor

Hunter 'Chip' Conner, former aide to the late Coach Bill Gibson, was named last week to succeed his former chief as head basketball coach at USF. Conner, assistant to Gibson at both USF and the University of Virginia, will take over his new duties immediately. He played his senior year at Virginia under Gibson and served as assistan coach with him since 1967.

"Conner's selection was a natural for us," according to Dr. Joe Howell, vice president for Student Affairs, who announced the appointment. "He not only has the personal and professional credentials for a major collegiate basketball coach, but he will give the USF program continuity and maintain the momentum Bill Gibson developed," Howell stated.

"Conner, who spearheaded our basketball recruitment effort, has the confidence of the present squad and the new players coming aboard this fall as well as those being sought for the future," added Howell.

The native of Glover, Va., Conner was voted the most outstanding high school basketball player in the state in his senior year at Halifax County High School in 1960. He then entered the University of Virginia and received the same award in college in 1964. That same year, his last, he made the coveted All-Atlantic Coast Conference first team and was named to the second team All-American academic team.

He scored 1157 career points, eighth highest among all-time Cavalier scorers and his 17.0 per game career average ranks sixth.

After graduating school at the University of Virginia, he coached two years at Lane High, Charlottesville. He compiled a 40-8 record and garnered two Capitol District championships before returning to Virginia in 1967 as assistant coach. Conner is married to the former Clara Forlines of South Boston, Va., and they have three boys, Chris, 7, and twins, Tim and Mark, age 5.
