Conference to Help Leaders Understand Mid-life Options

Mid-life work and learning options, a conference for leaders in government, industry, education and labor who are interested in the needs and options of people at mid-life will be held Apr. 21-23 at the Don Ce Sar Resort Hotel, St. Petersburgh Beach. The conference is sponsored by USF and the Florida Aging and Adult Services Program. It is designed for persons in policy making positions who may effect change and understand about mid-life.

According to Dr. Alan Entine, conference director and assistant academic vice president at the State University of New York (SUNY) at Stony Brook, the goal of mid-life counseling is to enable people to make a real change during a period of their life when they were formerly expected to stay put.

"We've reached a realization," Dr. Entine said, "that a career path just isn't going to last a lifetime. The system is going to have to open up."

In addition to panels and discussions, four speakers will be featured at the conference. Sessions will be in the Del Prado Room at 8 p.m. Apr. 21, from 9 a.m. to noon and 2-5:30 p.m. Apr. 22 and from 9 a.m.-noon Apr. 23. A reception at 9 p.m. Apr. 21 and the concluding luncheon at noon Apr. 23 will be in the Don Ce Sar Ballroom. The $20 registration fee ($10 for students) includes the Apr. 23 lunch and may be sent to the USF Center for Continuing Education.

Additional information is available from Lee Leavengood, director of Adult Services Program. Comic Romp 'Jimmy Shine' Opens

An irrepressible comic romp about a hapless hippie of the '60s comes to USF stage this week and next.

"Jimmy Shine," a play by Murray Schisgal (of "Luv" and "The Typist" and "The Tiger" fame) will be presented by the theatre department tonight, tomorrow and Apr. 20-24 in the University Theatre at 8:30 p.m. Associate professor of theatre Jack Belt directs the production.

Tickets for Jimmy Shine will be available at the USF Theatre Box Office beginning Apr. 8. General admission is $3; student admission (other than USF students) is $1.50.
